

I went to my first meeting last month and I could not believe the school board has fired Mr. Oftedahl. My heart was broken and so were all the kids in the school. He would always walk in the school with a smile on his face. At the last meeting the school board said it was a hard decision but if it was so hard for them they better start acting like it. It's not very good that I am 13 years old and I understand all this. And they also said their meeting was supposed to be a professional meeting but I have had more professional meetings in my head than that. So my question is why would you fire such a great man when you're not doing your own job? Maybe you should be fired!

Chase